Summary:

I am probably an expert now, after almost two years of isolation, to report on how I've been dealing with the changes that the pandemic has created in my daily life. While the negative aspects of being quarantined has certainly been a factor, there have also been positive opportunities to re-evaluate, re-think and restart.

As artists, we have a long association with dealing with the unknown. The art experience itself is an exploration of invention and deciphering meaning from nothing - ideas, invention, creative thoughts bubble up from our imaginations. This allows for new work to evolve. I feel the conference's theme "Revive" is an appropriate and descriptive word that has enabled me to reinvent myself and to explore new possibilities.
